

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A method of design rule checking an integrated circuit identifies any line having a line width marker and line width parameter, extracts each line having a line width marker, determines the line width parameter for each extracted line, and compares the line width parameter with an actual line width for the line.